Async (provisional title)

Mark Shinwell and David House, Jane Street Europe

We propose to give a talk about Jane Street's Async library. This is an industrial-strength library for writing correct concurrent programs without having to think (too hard).

Ideally we would like two independent projectors in order that the talk could be combined with a client/server demo. Preferably we would like a one hour slot or thereabouts to allow discussion, after the demo, of some implementation details of the library.

At the present time we are not completely sure who would give the presentation, but it is likely to involve one if not both of the authors named above.
